Mark Milliron - The Art and Science of Student Success: Using Design Thinking and Data Science to Help Students Learn Well and Finish Strong

Moderator: Gary Pratt, Eastern Washington University

Using examples from other sectors that bring together the best of design thinking and data science to achieve their diverse missions—from business to athletics to healthcare—we'll catalyze a conversation about how we leverage this approach in education. We'll then dive into examples of these insight and action analytics efforts in education, showing how schools, colleges, and universities are innovating with everything from predictive modeling to early-warning systems to engaging apps for students, faculty, and advisers that help more students learn well and successfully navigate their educational journeys.
